Add extra class to completed quizzes in category

Hello

On the category page, a link to each quiz is listed with a class of "aq-quiz-link". Would it be possible for each quiz that the user has completed to get an additional class- eg "aq-quiz-link completed".

This would open up a huge range of design and presentation options for template developers, and will allow for a much more interesting and user friendly experience!

Hello,

The following CSS classes are added to quizzes links when "Quizzes" or "Quiz category" page is opened by a registered user:

aq-quiz-link-nottry if the user haven't tried to pass the quiz aq-quiz-link-passed if the user passed the quiz successfully aq-quiz-link-notpassed if the user failed the quiz

Hi There

I'm not seeing those classes on this quiz category page:

<http://www.competition.classcastle.com/?categoryId=3>

I've got the latest version of the extension installed. Is there another setting that I need to turn on?

Thanks-

I've logged in with these details:

username: registered-member-3
password: 12345

I completed the first quiz, but none of the classes mentioned above are there.

Any ideas?

It seems you use modified version of template file for "Category" page (for example it contains `element`, but original template file doesn't contain it). Probably you use old version of template file.

Hi,

I have a similar question.

I am using the paid version and I am only allowing registered users to take the quizzes. They can only see the quiz. They cannot see the quiz category or list of quizzes. Is there a way to display (by changing the actual quiz CSS class) that they have passed or not? I am having trouble with people not knowing which quizzes they have passed.

I can send you a quiz example and login by email if needed.

Thanks!

The classes do not seem to change for me on a Quiz page or Quiz category page. The class remains `aq-quiz-link` no matter if a user has passed or not.

I'm using 3.5.5. I see that 3.6.0 is the latest version. Is it available in that version only?
