As for now I use ARI Quiz for marketing purposes on our news site. We will have weekly quizzes with no more than 4 questions in a quiz. Now our partners in this weeks quiz is a company wich sells home appliances etc. and they provide a vacuum cleaner as the grand prize.

"Which of the following products does Bróðirinn Ormsson (the partner) sell ?"

1. Home appliances
2. Laptops
3. Telescopes

It would be nice, both for us and our partner if this particular question would always show up in this quiz since it's a question about our partner and the rest of the questions is either about the news on our site or the site itself. So only 3 of the questions in the quiz would be random out of the 19 left of the questions.

As I pictured it, when you add a question in a quiz or bank, you can check "Always show if random", then it would always show up in the quiz even if it's a random quiz.

Kristinn.

Currently you can do the following, create two question categories inside necessary quiz and place partner questions to category 1 and sites questions to category 2. After this open 'category 2' settings page and set how much questions should be selected from this category.

Now that's resolved.. The only thing missing is JoomSEF integration wich would make this component one of my top3
