

---

Padding Displays Differently In Different Browsers

Posted by craad - 2010/07/12 00:33

---

I adjusted the padding for the top-row navigation (within menu.min.css under .ux-menu a) and it is displaying differently in different browsers/platforms. In IE 8, for example, the navigation overlaps and extends to a second row below. How can it be adjusted so it appears in line with the flash video below it and flush with the search bar to the right of it across all browsers?

I look forward to your response.

My website is here.

=====

Re:Padding Displays Differently In Different Browsers

Posted by admin - 2010/07/12 06:53

---

Hello,

This problem still exists? When we open your site in IE 8, everything looks good.

Regards,
ARI Soft

=====

Re:Padding Displays Differently In Different Browsers

Posted by craad - 2010/07/12 18:58

---

Right I see that it looks good. Is there a way to get the navigation bar to automatically expand as far to the right as possible to be flush with the search bar in every browser? In firefox for the PC it looks great, but in all other browsers there is a slight gap (which is very small).

=====

Re:Padding Displays Differently In Different Browsers

Posted by admin - 2010/07/13 10:08

---

Could you provide screenshot where we can see what you mean?

Regards,
ARI Soft

=====

Re:Padding Displays Differently In Different Browsers

Posted by craad - 2010/07/13 20:39

---

In the attached screenshots, in firefox for the mac the navigation bar appears closer to the search bar. In Safari for the Mac, it appears farther away. From what I remember, in Firefox for the PC (all latest versions) the nav bar is touching or flush against the search bar.

What can I do to get the nav bar to appear flush against the search bar in every browser? From what I understand, each browser is reading the CSS differently. <http://www.ari-soft.com/images/fbfiles/images/firefoxmac.jpg>

=====

Re:Padding Displays Differently In Different Browsers

Posted by craad - 2010/07/13 20:51

---

---

Here is what it looks like in Safari (Mac) <http://www.ari-soft.com/images/fbfiles/images/safarimac.jpg>

=====

Re:Padding Displays Differently In Different Browsers

Posted by craad - 2010/07/20 17:59

---

Sir, do you have any feedback as to how I can fix this?

=====

Re:Padding Displays Differently In Different Browsers

Posted by admin - 2010/07/21 06:59

---

We can't check it in Safari (MacOS), but we see the following in Safari 5.0.7533.16 (Windows):

<http://www.ari-soft.com/images/fbfiles/images/safari.png>

It looks normally.

Regards,
ARI Soft

=====