horizontal mode and no sub-items showing ...

Hi !

I tried this wonderful menu component because i needed an horizontal menu with sub-items showing in a transition effect.

It appears to be wonderful but ... in firefox or internet explorer, i don't have sub-items showing.
The only way to show them is to turn IE in compatibility mode but the boxes turn into horrible.

I tried to mess around with Z-Index, going from -500000000000 to 500000000000, but nothing changes the problem.

As i'm not a CSS PRO, i'm here to ask for a solution !

Thanks !

Add the following CSS rules:

```
body #pillmenu
{
  overflow: visible;
}
```

```
#pillmenu .ux-menu li a
{
  padding: 10px 20px 10px 14px;
  line-height: 12px;
}
```

```
#pillmenu .ux-menu li li a
{
  padding: 10px 10px;
```

}

Thank you a lot !

It works like a charm !

I still have some artefacts on the right of the sub-items of the menu.
It seems to be limited at the right of the longest sub-item.

Is there a way to remove them ?

Add the next CSS rule:

```
#pillmenu .ux-menu li a
{
  float: none;
}
```

Ok nice, thank you !

Last question : is there a way to disable the little arrows that are next to every title-item ?
I'm asking this because it is positionning itself over the last characters of the sub-item text.

Try the following:

```
.ux-menu .ux-menu-arrow
{
  display: none;
}
```

You're really as fast as lightning !!!

It's ok for the arrows not showing but now ... people would never know that there is sub-menu items ... so i'll reformulate my last question :

"Is there a way to shift the arrows to the right ?" or "Is there a way to define the width of all menu items ?

Thanks !

Use the next CSS rule:

```
.ux-menu .ux-menu-arrow
{
    right: 3px;
}
```
