
Width and sizes tag's in Lightbox

Posted by Fred Bloggs - 2010/04/13 01:00

Hi,

I have tried to change the width parameters within the lightbox.

All I am trying to do is to remove the bottom scroll bar from the lightbox to display only 710px of data and crop the rest (right side).

Like a wrapper.

And display the contents of a page/link

Please see www.jtml.co.uk/direct

The artical code I am using is:

team

Any help would be great.

As a 'by the way' if the lightbox could also cut the results to the left of a page it would be great (I think even a wrapper does not do this.

Hello,

If you want to avoid horizontal scrolling in lightbox, you can add the following CSS rule to template CSS file:

```
#SLB-Contenido iframe {
    overflow-x:hidden;

Hi,

Many thanks for that.
Would there be any change in the artical code ?

Is it possible to make the artical display like a menu link or display automatically ?

"ARI Sexy Lightbox" can open lightbox automatically when a page is loaded and it comes with "System - ARI Sexy Lightbox" plugin which provide ability to use plugin anywhere. You can place plugin code in menu item title that create lightbox for menu item. "ARI Sexy Lightbox Lite" doesn't provide this ability.

It seems our previous solution doesn't work in IE. We'll investigate it and provide modified solution.

Hi,

Thank you for the update.

Would you know when the up date will be avaiable and also if one purchased the full version would I be able to upgrade for free ?

As I have customers waiting for IE8+ sites and the lightbox would be ideal.

Regards and many thanks

Hello,

Sorry, but IE doesn't provide ability to hide only one scrollbar (horizontal or vertical) for external pages in IFRAME. It can hide all scrollbars or show it together.

Hi,

So this is a problem with iframe and not ari software. So the problem should be directed to the development of iframe ?

However it does work in firefox.... hmm interesting.

Hello,

It works in FireFox and other browsers except IE because IFRAME in these browsers supports 'overflow', 'overflow-x' and 'overflow-y' CSS properties, but IE doesn't support this property. You can find this information using search engine like Google.

Hi Karma,

Thanks for the information so as usual its down to MS and IE not being compatible.
Am I correct in thinking that once IE is recoded to cope with 'overflow' which is common in CSS then it will work ok ?

Or will the ari-soft lightbox code need to be changed also ?

It doesn't require to change 'ARI Sexy Lightbox' code if IE supported 'overflow'.

Scenario: Mac / Google Chrome is adding scroll bars to article lightbox links. The scroll bars are not visible on an PC platform.

I need to get rid of them.

Thanks!

Open the following file:

/templates/rt_replicant_j15/css/template.css

and replace the following code:

html {height: 100%;margin-bottom: 1px;}

with:

html {height: 100%;}

THANK YOU! that did the trick. After speaking to another developer here.... they had added that 1px as an IE fix... Very good catch though! I will have to figure out something else for that 1px IE fix though.

You are welcome. BTW, if you want to add specific CSS styles for IE browsers only, conditional comments can be used for this purpose.
