Sure,

If you mean user wants to stop passing quiz for some time and then get back to it (for example he just closes browser window or there is connection interruption). Then when he is back to this quiz again he will continue from the place where he stopped last time. If you mean that administrator can make test unavailable temporarily, then you can change test status to disabled.

ok..

but if i made additional button to exit quiz when user not yet finishing quiz (ex. total question 10,user was done 6 question and then exit quiz with button exit aforementioned) and user want to continue quiz next time,is user continue from the question where he exit (question no.7)?

If your button will for example redirect the user to another page - no problem, user will continue quiz next time from the question where he exits.

ok..user can skip question and go back to the question later.

i mean,is user can leave blank the answer (not answer the question)?

i'm sorry for my english...:)

There is no possibility NOT to answer the question. User should select the answer anyway.

We've decided to include this functionality in the release next week. When user does not select the answer he will be asked whether he wants to skip the question without the answer or not. If so, the question will be skipped.
