Specifying a menu to open read more into

Posted by 6degres - 2011/06/14 11:36

I was wondering how one could go about to specify a menu item to open the + link in.

Currently, this opens the article in the current menu. I think this is a Joomla parameter but thought I could get the answer here.

Thanks,
Danny

Joomla! identify active menu item by "Itemid" request parameter. If you want to specify common active menu item for all links, you can try to use the next code:

+

Just specify necessary Itemid.

wow, your tech support is the fastest :-)

The solution you gave me works great except under SEF, this won't work.

Any idea how to acheive this with SEF on ?

Super thanks (btw)

Note/Question

When I link to the article with the {$readmore_link}, it seems to force it not to display the intro text even though the global option are set to display it as well as the menu (item id) I am routing it to ?

Is this an option in the parameter or is this my configurations ?

Perhaps it would be interesting to have a {$article_link} parameter as well ?

Thanks
Danny

What is {$article_link} parameter? {$readmore_link} variable contains link to article.

yes i was just suggesting this might be a solution as the readmore link seems to only display the second part of the text (not the introtext).

I was wondering if this was a specification in the readmore link since my configurations in the Joomla articles are set to display the introtext as well as the menu where i send the readmore link to.

The module uses standard Joomla! API that generates links to articles. It is not possible to specify show or not introtext with help request variables. This should be specified in article settings, menu item settings and etc.

OK, that's what I thought.

I will check my parameters again. I suspect i'm getting confused with the hierarchy of global/menu/articles parameters ;-)

Thanks
