Hi all,
i have a horizontal menu with a vertical sub-menu on my page. my problem is that on IE7 the sub menu appears behind everything else on the page. i tried tweaking the Z-Index values of various elements on stage but without success. does anyone have any solution or have ever encountered that problem?

Thanks!

Hi,
thanks for your reply. i would love to do that but the site is currently offline. i will upload it and will post the link here. can you give some general tips on things that usually cause these kind of trouble?

thanks!

It can occur due to "z-index" and "overflow: hidden" CSS property.

ok, it was long but we got it online.
the link is: <http://www.kaplanoland.com/index.php>
notice that if you view the page in IE the menu appears behind the image!
other browsers display it correctly. i tried setting z-indexes but it seems to not make any difference.

thanks.

Add the following CSS rule:

```
DIV#menu1
{
  z-index: 10;
}
```
