Hi,

I have installed the menu on a site i am building for a friend and customised it with out too much issue with help going through the forum.

Going through testing I have found that when i load aup a gallery image which uses light box the menu stays infront of the open picture.

Is there a way I can make the menu stay behind the image popups?

The site can be found at www.sensecere.com

I have tested this in both IE8 and the latest FF both with the same issue.

Thanks.

Roger.

Hello,

We suppose this issue with "z-index" CSS property but we can't check it because your site requires credentials.

Hi

Sorry I completely forgot about the site being in offline mode, I have now put it online so you can have a look.

I have changed the z-index from the default -1 to 1 but still have the same issue.

Thanks.

Add the next CSS rule to site template CSS file:

```
body #shadowbox_container
{
  z-index: 11000;
}
```
