

---

autoloading sexy lightbox with jomsocial

Posted by jimcapraro - 2014/04/01 02:00

---

First let me say that your support is absolutely excellent. Every time I have posted a question here you have responded with prompt highest quality assistance. Thank you very much!

I have a jomsocial community embedded in a the protostar template's "position 3" / "blog-roll" position on my websites homepage. This is a close website that can only be accessed by registered users. I have created a ari sexy lightbox module to be used occasionally for announcements that should appear after a registered user logs in. I have set the lightbox module to be only accessible to registered users (and upwards) and to auto-load on the home page menu.

My problem is that when I click on any of the jomsocial toolbar menu items to show photos, or videos, or users, etc the lightbox autoloads again. I assume that this is because jomsocial is embedded in the homepage, and each time a jomsocial module is run the home page refreshes.

Is there a way to configure lightbox to only run the first time the home page is loaded but not run on subsequent openings of the home page?

Jim Capraro

The site is mfa-sibs.org - I am sending login credentials to you via email to info@ari-soft.com

=====

Re:autoloading sexy lightbox with jomsocial

Posted by admin - 2014/04/01 05:58

---

Hello,

Set "Open on load" parameter to "Only once" and "Cookie duration" parameter to 0 value.

Regards,
ARI Soft

=====

Re:autoloading sexy lightbox with jomsocial

Posted by jimcapraro - 2014/04/01 17:21

---

Thank you for you wonderful support (once again)!

=====