

---

How do you compile the results from all users?

Posted by rubberguard - 2008/08/28 16:05

---

Hi, I'm designing an online course for an client and my client wants to do statistical analysis of the results from a quiz from different users. So I was wondering how do you compile the results together so that, for example, you show the result of all the answers to question 1 from all the users, and then all the answers to question 2 from all the users...etc.

I think there must be someway to make it so that you can export the data to excel or something?

Thanks,

Dennis

=====

Re:How do you compile the results from all users?

Posted by admin - 2008/08/29 09:16

---

There is no functionality to view all answers for a question. But there is a detailed statistics for answers - please have a look at our demo.

There is export in various formats. Detailed statistics can be imported to Word and HTML. Statistics overview can be imported to CSV and Excel.

Regards,
ARI Soft

=====