Hello,

I like the easy slider and wonder if it works like Anything Slider, where it shows any article with pretty much anything in it. What I'd like to do is have an article with a flash object that plays first thing, then the user can slide to the next article with more relevant information.

Is this possible?

The other concern I have is I do my testing on my local server before it hits the live production domain server. So, my question is can I do development then use the same file key on the registered domain? Hate buy multiple copies just to spin my wheels just to find out that the module has conflicts with other competing code where I have to just not use the product. Seems others on this site that have posted their sites to find out their not even using the product on their Production site after paying for the product.

Do you have a demo version, or a version that only works on <http://localhost/foldername>?

Thanks...gl

Hello,

"ARI Easy Slider" is under GNU GPL license and can be installed on any number of sites. It doesn't require any additional fee.

About the first question, could you provide link to page where we can see sample what you want to achieve?

Regards,
ARI Soft
