
Bug with JoomFish

Posted by acidicX - 2010/06/16 10:26

Hi,

there is a bug when I use the slider with JoomFish.

If I don't have a translation for the module itself, it's finde - even if I switch the language, it displays the loaded content in the other language.

However, I need to translate the module with JoomFish to change the heading. But thats not working:

First, the settings below the "article" section of the module will not be saved by JoomFish.

Second, every time I visit the page where the module is active with the 2nd language, I'm getting redirected to another page...

I really need to translate the module! Is there a fix for this?

Best regards,
acidicX

Hello,

We'll investigate possibility to integrate 'ARI Easy Slider' with 'JoomFish' and report about results soon.

Could you provide temporary access to your Joomla! backend by email that we can investigate this issue? We have tested 'ARI Easy Slider' with 'JoomFish' on our test server and the module shows articles in slider in active language. Regarding backend language of the module, it uses INI file (standard Joomla! approach) and new INI file can be created for adding new language.

That's correct. But try translating the module itself - that's not working (Components -> JoomFish -> Translation -> 2nd Language -> Modules -> slider module)

No email yet... maybe caught by the spamfilter?
Can you upload it here?

We have sent it again from our secondary mail. Updated extension is also available in 'Member Area' on our site.
Upgrade 'ARI Easy Slider' module and try to translate it with help 'JoomFish', please.

Works perfectly now!

I know you can't test with every extension and I probably wouldn't have asked but JoomFish is an extremely popular extension - and I think you are also interested to steadily improve your product quality.

Thanks very much!
